ROB ROY AND HIS WIFE ARRESTED SEPARATELY, MEET IN SAME COURT

Too Much Xmas Cheer Causes Strange Reunion on the

"Morning After."

Mary Roy's every of how her husband. Bob Roy-and she said that was his set, truly name-probably was at dressing and fixing breakfast for their four children and all the while frantically wondering where his wife was working on the sympathies of Mag-letrate Appleton in the West filde Coutr to-day. He warned her against drinkag too much at a Christmas party teen in her own spartment, more stern-s with which Patrolman Daly charged her, and then bade her go.
Then the Magistrate called the next

Then the Magistrate called the next case.

"We had a fiftle Christmas party up at my flat at No. 525 West Forty-fourth street," said the prisoner, a well dressed man, after Patrolman Hughes said he found him singing on Forty-fifth street. "I suppose I drank a little too unich Anyway, my wife went out to find one of our four child en who was visiting a neighbor, and when she didn't come back aright away. I went to find her.

"The cold sir and the drink made me happy mad I started singing. Then Officer Hughes Sot me. But, Sidge, my poor wife is at home fixing breaklast or the backs' know what's happened to me."

frantic. She doesn't know what's happened to me."

Magistrate Appleton started.

"Is your name Rob Roy!" he demanded. Apparently he hadn't heard the clerk call the name.

The prisoner modified in the affirmative. The Magistrate called an attendant and sent him from the room on a sun. He returned in a moment with Mary Roy-she hadn't had time to leave the bullding. She and Rob saw yach other simultaneously.

"Ob. Mary. 12 you ever forgive me?" cried Rob.

Nob. Rob. I will never do it again."

woh, Rob. I will never do it again" would Mary. Each thought the other had come as pure about too much Christmas cheer, especially noisy cheer taken it to the cheers. Then he sent Bob and Mary home to the children.

Propelly those Propably they are waiting for that Treakfast yet," and the Magistrate.
